Hi Brenda,

Thanks for the follow-up on the question as to who "comes to the rescue" should Keller and the insurance company go belly up or run out of funds and there's still contamination to be addressed? I think this is a question we need to further explore because given the limited funding that is available and the long term work that needs to take place, it's a really good question that as you know based on our calls, is going to come up over and over again. It is one of the questions that I have listed under my Q&A and I think we're going to need to say something. Is there any other program we can look into? I'm also wondering if the Coast Guard kicks in given the potential risk to Flathead Lake? Just throwing out thoughts here. Thanks, Libby

I just spoke with Sharon Kercher and Randy Breeden was wrong...there is no funding mechanism for RCRA so EPA cannot commit to clean up the site
